BLOOD

We live by our blood, and on it. We thrive or starve, as our blood is rich or poor. There is nothing else to live on or by.

When strength is full and spirits high we are being refreshed—bone, muscle and brain, in body and mind—with continual flow of rich blood. This is health.

When weak, in low spirits, no cheer, no spring, when rest is not rest and sleep is not sleep, we are starved; our blood is poor; there is little nutriment in it.

Back of the blood is food, to keep the blood rich. When it fails, take

Home Circle Column.

A Column Dedicated To Tired Mothers as They Join The Home Circle.

For a wife, take the daughter of a good mother.

A great singer had just finished singing "Home Sweet Home," and many of the audience were in tears. "It's a beautiful song," said a girl to an older woman who sat next to her. "Yes," was the reply "and the sentiment to which it moves all those people is beautiful. How much happier the world would be if everyone had as much principle and sentiment on the subject, and followed out a plain, every-day rule of making home sweet."

o o o

A gentleman hands us the following scrap, and we presume that he knows better than we do as to the statement being a truthful one. From the bit of confusion we have noticed in approaching these masculine groups we rather suspect their words are not wide of the mark. "It is certainly amusing when one has a little leisure time to approach a group of men on the sidewalk, and listen to the conversation just to hear how profanity mixes in. This man tears off an oath and that one tips off a dozen bad words in no time. All of a sudden the loud laugh ceases and the most refined language of the 'group' is capable of using takes its place. Goodness what a change—and what caused it—O, nothing, only a lady has approached them, and they have a little more respect for her than themselves. Well, well, a lady is a missionary wherever she may."

THE SMALL BOY.

Nothing is better calculated to ruin a small boy than for him to have two homes, to either of which he is permitted to go at will. If mother reproves or chastizes him for his naughtiness, he takes his hat and goes over to grandma's or auntie's house. There he is received, cajoled, petted and permitted to remain a day or two, or perhaps a week. Then, because of some over-act he picks up his hat and goes off home where he is kindly received and no reference is made to his former misconduct. In this way he is permitted to oscillate between two homes, all the time developing his disregard of the restraints of rightful authority. Trained in this way he grows up self-willed, has no regard for the rights or wishes of others, and unless some remarkable freak of grace interposes to check his wild career, he is pretty certain to land in the penitentiary.

NEIGHBORS.

A good neighbor is always the most desirable of possessions, although in some cases their social value is undervalued. What constitutes a good neighbor is also frequently misconstrued, although the sensible acceptance of the term is, the neighbor who is friendly without being officious, helpful without being superfluously so and finally, one who respects the privacy of others' household affairs by a certain degree of formality of manner.

The social neighbor is not always the useful neighbor yet each in her place has special influences to exert of equally beneficial consequences. The sympathetic neighbor is also a popular one, but she has to exercise continuous tact, lest her soothing influence may be occasionally overdone or utilized at untimely periods. The inquisitive neighbor is always a dread to everybody within the reach of her inquisitive curiosity, as she does not seem to have any intuitive respect for others' feelings as regards their divulgence of personal affairs to an outsider.

The truest and most respected of all neighbors, however, is the one who always speaks well of everybody, who devotes the largest share of her sympathies to her own affairs, is chary of administering unsolicited advice, and who always waits until her social and useful capacities are requested, and never renders herself officious even in her most sanguine efforts at proving herself a good neighbor.

SAFEGUARDS FOR YOUNG MEN.

Now, what are the safeguards for young men. The first safeguard of which we want to speak is a love of home. There are those who have to idea of the pleasures that concentrate around that word "home." Perhaps your early abode was shadowed with vice or poverty. Harsh words and petulance and scolding may have destroyed all the sanctity of that spot. Love, kindness and self-sacrifice, which
